

A Four Minute Talk Why You Should Build Now

WE'RE poised—halted—as a nation. Like the pendulum of a clock that has reached the limit of its sweep and hesitates, so this country swept on for two years in pursuit of war. Peace has come—we're halted! You yourself are delaying action on that building contract! We've got to get started back again or Reconstruction will be a long, laborous, expensive process.

Housing Conditions in This City Are Strained

For two years there has been no building our population has increased, rents have jumped, property values have risen and people can find no place to live. It is a serious situation.

You know that right now any man with a house or an apartment can get his own price for it. There was never a better time to build from an investment standpoint.

Your Building Will Help Speed Reconstruction

For the first time in years materials are available, deliveries by railroads are certain, and there's labor to do the work. Experts agree that it will be years before building prices will recede as a result business men the country over are launching their building projects. They're striking while the iron is hot.

You Must Help Re-establish Business

This is the critical moment in our national history. We must pour business into our industries to tide over the transition period and start wheels whirling again. Your $10,000 forces sub-contracts that will filter clear through the fabric of our industry.

What We Need Is Co-operation

If you'll help, and the other fellow will help, we'll relieve conditions in this town, we'll make good business investments, we'll have lots of business and prosperity. What we need is to get started. Your contract is the keystone. Let's GO.
